Yeasayer are unleashed and more focused than ever

Anand Wilder, of the beloved indie-rock band, talks new album "Erotic Reruns."

PAT KING

"Well, it's really just [that] the record industry was not really working out for us anymore." That could be an understatement from any musician trying to make a living these days.

But coming from Anand Wilder, one of the principal songwriters of the beloved indie-rock band Yeasayer, that sentiment could have a little more unpacking to it than a clear-cut artist-against-bean-counters scenario.

Formed in 2006, the band — consisting of Wilder on guitar and vocals, singer and multi-instrumentalist Chris Keating, and Ira Wolf Tuton on bass — have stretched the boundary lines of pop music to hallucinatory levels, never staying in one place long enough to be defined by limiting genres. This year, the band broke from working with high-profile alternative labels Secretly Canadian and Mute to release their new album, "Erotic Reruns," on their own Yeasayer

ALL PHOTOS CHAD MOORE

Records. While they lost support from labels, having their independence allowed them to dictate their album cycle as the band released four singles from the nine-track album ahead of the album's release.

"There wasn't enough kind of financial support," says Wilder of the move toward more DIY approach, adding, "You have to sacrifice a lot of your copyright and intellectual property when you work with the record labels. So we figured, let's just do it ourselves. And then, if we have hits, or if we actually sell records, we'll reap more of the actual profits instead of just giving them to some record label that's not even putting in that much money to help us create anything."

The resulting album is the most streamlined and direct representation of what the band has been trying to achieve over the past decade-plus. Songs veer into unexpected directions, such as the Wilder-penned "Let Me Listen in on You" which starts as a lush Beatles-influenced synth-pop ballad and breaks down only to erupt with a tense industrial bridge. These too-crazy-to-work moments happen all over the album, with both Wilder and Keating delivering transfixing hooks over the bands melting-pot party rhythms.

The album is also the band's most outwardly political release to date. Songs like "24-Hour Hateful Live!" attack the Trump administration and horrid state of the world head-on with lyrics like "ICE to ISIS, migrant crisis / Gleeful cruelty at the top." For Wilder, discussing the elephant in the room wasn't necessarily that difficult. But, making sure their lyrics would stand the test of time would be the true balancing act.

"I think, with this album, we were like, well, we have to address it, because it's just such a horrible, horrible time," he says. "Then, once you delve into it, then you need to figure out how you're going to address the politics. And I think we tried to do some kind of more obscure, abstract lyrics and then some very, very direct ones."

While setting out on their own has helped to give Yeasayer a new sense of purpose and freedom, Wilder explains that the three-headed beast still needs to occasionally fight for larger shares of the meal when it comes to getting ideas on tape.

"There's a lot of ideas that are bad ideas, and you have to duke it out, and you have to make compromises, and you have to hope that the group decision is superior to the solo decision," explains Wilder. "And then, if you really feel strongly about something, then you have to fight to make it work on the album. I love — there's a great story with the movie 'Young Frankenstein,' where Mel Brooks didn't want to put in the 'Putting on the Ritz' scene. He thought it was too over the top. But Gene Wilder said, no, that's the best scene in the movie. And then Mel Brooks said, OK, all right. But only because Gene Wilder fought for it [did] they keep it in the movie. And then you think, how could that not be in the movie? It's a pivotal part of the movie. And it's hilarious, too! And so, I think that's the same thing with the band. If you really think something is essential, you'll fight for it."

Boston Pizza Festival Brings the Heat to City Hall Plaza

Just call it pizza paradise: on Saturday, July 13 and Sunday, July 14, 30 of the best pizzerias from the Boston area and beyond will gather on City Hall Plaza for the third year in a row to dole out slices and pay tribute to the food that's always good, even when it's bad.

Among the participating local shops are The White Bull Tavern, Fiorina, Upper Crust, Wicked Cheesy, and Pasta Beach. Fans of the shuttered Cucchiello's Bakery in East Boston will be happy to learn that the pizzeria will be making a comeback just for the festival as well. There will also be more than a few visitors from the place where it all started: Italy. Pizza e Fantasia, Langella Pizzeria, Da Peppe e Figli, and Starita e Materdei are all making the journey from Naples to sling their sauce-and-cheese specialties.

From Neapolitan to Sicilian, just about every style will be represented. Yes, that includes inventive

"pizza cones" and dessert—there's even an entire booth dedicated to Nutella pizza. All of the pies will be cooked on-site in a handcrafted Marra Forni oven, and since hot pizza is best enjoyed with cold refreshments to wash it down, beer, wine, and Aperol spritzes will be served alongside the slices. Have dietary restrictions? No problem—gluten-free options will be available.

The family-friendly festival activities and entertainment will be appropriately pizza-themed, too. They include "pizza acrobatics" performed by the famous Jersey Pizza Boys, pizza-making demos, and a pizza-tossing station for little ones to hone their skills. Live bands will also play tunes throughout the weekend.

The festival—which now holds the title of largest pizza event in the country—was founded by Raffaele Scalzi, owner of Casa Mia Cucina Italiana in Marblehead, and Giancarlo Natale, who has an extensive background in event coordination. The duo's goal in creating the event was to celebrate their heritage and share their passion for the beloved food.

Admission to the festival is $15 per person, and each slice is $2. If you want to go big and kick things up a notch, there's a $50 VIP option that will give you early access to the festival, free pizza from 11 am to noon, and an exclusive gift bag filled with goodies from vendors. To find out more about the Boston Pizza Festival and buy tickets, visit bostonpizzafestival.com. KIM WINDYKA

WEEKEND, JULY 8, 9, 10, 11-14, 2019

9 fun things to do in Boston this weekend

Need some help making weekend plans? We've got you covered. From porch fests to country concerts, here are the best things to do in this weekend.

JP Porchfest

Mini concerts will once again take over the porches and patios of Jamaica Plain this weekend for the 6th annual JP Porchfest. If you haven't checked out the event yet, it's a must-see for local music lovers. The outdoor jams return to the neighborhood on Saturday, July 13, noon-6 p.m., Jamaica Plain, free, jpporchfest.org

Open Newbury Street

Pedestrians won't have to worry about cars as they stroll through the famed street this weekend. The annual Open Newbury Street festivities kicks off its 2019 season on Sunday, which means visitors can explore the area's top shops and restaurants without having to share with motor vehicles. The festivities are also set to include music by local artists, outdoor games and more. July 14, 10 a.m.-6 p.m., Newbury Street, Boston, free, boston.gov/calendar/open-newbury-street-1

Free Fun Fridays

As part of the Highland Street Foundation's Free Fun Fridays series, a number of museums and cultural institutions around Massachusetts are free to explore on Fridays throughout the summer. This weekend, visitors will have the chance to check out the Museum of Fine Arts, New England Quilt Museum, the Children's Museum of Greater Fall River and more, free of charge. July 12, various locations, highlandstreet.org/programs/free-fun-fridays-2019

Florida Georgia Line

The hit country music duo is back in the Hub this weekend. See Florida Georgia Line rock out at the Xfinity Center when their Can't Say I Ain't Country Tour comes to town on Friday night. July 12, 7 p.m., Xfinity Center, 885 S Main St., Mansfield, $132+, livenation.com

Bastille Day

Party like the French this weekend without the long flight to Paris. The annual Bastille Day celebrations return to Boston on Friday, and the French Cultural Center once again has a big block party planned. Join thousands of guests in Back Bay to enjoy live music, food, dancing and more. July 12, 6 p.m.-11 p.m., Marlborough Street, Boston, $34, frenchculturalcenter.org/events/bastille-day-2019

Rob Schneider

The veteran comic ships up to Boston this weekend for a night of laughs at The Wilbur. See Rob Schneider bring the funny when the former "Saturday Night Live" star comes to town on, well, Saturday night. July 13, 7 p.m., The Wilbur, 246 Tremont St., Boston, $32, thewilbur.com

Bug Fest

Bug out at the Franklin Park Zoo this weekend. The zoo is hosting a Bug Fest day on Saturday, complete with all kinds of activities centered around our favorite creepy crawlies. The festivities will include a puppet show, LEGOLAND workshops, animal encounters with zookeepers and more. July 13, 10 a.m.-3 p.m., Franklin Park Zoo, 1 Franklin Park Rd., Boston, $14.95+, zoonewengland.org

'Stuber'

The world of ride sharing gets the action comedy treatment in this new flick starring former WWE star Dave Bautista and comedian Kumail Nanjiani. The duo plays a detective and an Uber driver who get caught up in all sorts of antics as they track down a blood-thirsty bad guy. Opens July 11, various locations, stubertickets.com

'Evil Dead II'

Take a trip down memory lane with Ash and company at a special screening of this comedy horror classic this weekend. The second installment of Sam Raimi's hit "Evil Dead" franchise will be back on the big screen for one night only at the Coolidge Corner Theatre on Saturday night. July 13, 11:59 p.m., Coolidge Corner Theatre, 290 Harvard St., Brookline, $13.25, coolidge.org METRO STAFF

Are you going places? Or looking for places to go?

Managing your benign prostatic hyperplasia (BPH) alone may not be enough. If you are on BPH therapy and visiting the bathroom frequently, you may have an overactive bladder (OAB).

The immediate need to 'go' interrupts your day and night – and it may not be caused by your BPH.

- Do you have to use the bathroom at least 8 times a day?
- Do you still wake up 2 or more times each night to use the bathroom?
- Do you experience a need to use the bathroom immediately (urinary urgency)?

If these symptoms disrupt your day and night, you may also have a condition called OAB.

A clinical research study is testing the safety and effectiveness of an investigational drug in men on BPH therapy experiencing OAB symptoms. Over 1000 participants in over 135 study centers across North America and Europe are expected to take part in the COURAGE Study.

Beer gardens you need to check out this summer

There's no better way to cool off from the scorching temperatures than with an ice cold beer. But sipping on brews while your home's AC blasts you in the face isn't exactly the most social way to enjoy the beverage. Instead, get outside and soak in the sun while drinking your favorite brews at one of the city's many beer gardens.

Trillium on the Greenway

One of the most popular spots to enjoy a brew outdoors in Boston is Trillium on the Greenway, which is back for its third year this summer. Located on High Street and Atlantic Avenue, the fan-favorite spot is perfect for the after work crowds and offers a wide selection of Trillium brews, as well as some vino, to try.

The Patios

The outdoor set up at City Hall Plaza once again features tasty brews from Wachusett Brewing Company, which is back at The Patios this season. Check out the tasty draft selections from Wachusett's iconic airstream trailer, plus, non-beer lovers have a reason to celebrate as well thanks to margarita offerings, which are new this year.

Cisco Brewers Seaport

You don't need to sail to Nantucket in order to sip on Cisco this summer. The Bay State brewery has a special pop-up beer garden on Northern Avenue in the Seaport this summer, featuring a great selection of Cisco brews, as well as vino from Nantucket Vineyards Wines. Bites from Loco Taqueria & Oyster Bar Luke's Lobster and Flatbread are also available at the pop-up.

ALL PHOTOS ISTOCK

SoWa Beer Garden

As if you needed another reason to visit the SoWa Open Market, the venue now has a beer garden to go along with its amazing collection of vendors. Located on Harrison Avenue, the SoWa Beer Garden features a great selection of local craft brews, plus ciders and wines. Guests can also enjoy lawn games, live music and more along with their suds this summer.

City Winery on the Greenway

The Greenway seems to be the hub for beer gardens in Boston, and City Winery has joined in on the fun this year. Setting up shop at Dewey Square this season, the venue is a bit different from the others on the list as it's technically a wine garden offering a selection of reds, whites and rosé. However, they also have brews and ciders too thanks to Harpoon, so there's a little something for everyone. METRO STAFF

Jesse Eisenberg stars
as Casey Davies.
BLEEKER STREET

Jesse Eisenberg gives Metro the scoop on his role in the new dark comedy "The Art of Self-Defense."

MOLLY GIVEN

There are few movies in today's day and age that completely pull the wool over your eyes up until the very last scene — and Riley Stearns' second feature film, "The Art of Self-Defense," is one of them. The film stars Jesse Eisenberg and tells the story of Casey Davies, a frail, innocent and completely defenseless 36-year-old man who is brutally mugged in a vicious attack that almost kills him. The attack leads Casey to join a karate dojo, where he meets a slew of polarizing characters including the deceitfully bellicose Sensei (Alessandro Nivola).

The interesting themes that continually run throughout the feature highlight the extremes of human behavior and shine a light on how society's expectations can lead people to do very dangerous, and almost uncharacteristic, things. "When I first read the script, I thought, I don't want to do this kind of thing, I know what it is," says Eisenberg. "By Page 15, I realized the movie is completely different from what I originally expected. It's actually a brilliant satire on the absurdities of masculinity and the length men go to in the attempt to be strong."

Although the film does highlight the pressure one can feel from a misogynistic environment, that's not what the point is.

"It all comes from a sincere world perspective. Riley felt a genuine concern with his place in society as a male. That kind of earnestness comes through in the humor and the violence," says Eisenberg. "Riley practices jiu-jitsu every day, so this was not written by someone who thinks karate is silly or something that can be mocked. Same with violence. He thinks violence has some utility, but he just didn't know what that utility was. It's not a movie that mocks karate or mocks men. It mostly questions misogyny and masculinity, but it's questioning it from a place of concern rather than from a place of mockery. I think that's why it all works, because it feels sincere and didactic and doesn't feel condescending."

Just like in the fighting world, the film starts off with a warm-up of events, throws a few punches and then absolutely knocks you out with startling twists, turns and surprises. Plus, there are actual knockouts in the dojo as well. "I did about three intense weeks of training for the movie. I was lucky, I was only a Yellow Belt so I didn't have to be as intense as some of the other characters," says Eisenberg. "I thought of everything to the extreme. Casey is timid to an extreme, and then when he becomes strengthened, he is aggressive to an extreme."

The extreme nature of the film works well with the setting that Stearns

"I realized the movie is completely different from what I originally expected. It's actually a brilliant satire on the absurdities of masculinity and the length men go to in the attempt to be strong."

wanted to create, which is not supposed to be known to the audience. Think of it as a parallel universe where power is limited even when ego is not, and the characters are free to interpret and blur the lines of moral ambiguity. "There is a certain bluntness and formality to the way the characters behave. It's aided by the fact that we can't place it in a specific time or location," says Eisenberg. "The characters feel like they are part of the same universe. Even the powerful and scary people in the movie are not horrifying movie characters. The antagonist in this movie is actually just a small-business owner who runs a karate studio. He's not trying to take over the world. All of the ambitions of these characters feel small even if they're malevolent or dangerous. It's an aesthetic that allows for the kind of commentary on masculinity to be highlighted without it feeling like it's a specific commentary on men today or on political situations."

Eisenberg's Casey is the driving force behind the movie's theme. "Casey is the perfect member for this group. He's desperate to belong somewhere, he's desperate for guidance, he's desperate for authority."

The ending, just like the film, is not what you would expect. Also just like the film, it is a comical hit on the ironic stipulations that are put on individuals. It serves its purpose of not trying to hammer a message down anyone's throats but still showcases the film's impressive ability to continually surprise.

"Casey is kind of a hollowed-out creature who doesn't seem to have his own core convictions until the movie finds its revolution. The surprise for the audience is that Casey has concocted a plan, after you're watching him for an hour and a half, as this kind of cipher of a person who doesn't have his own set of opinions," says Eisenberg. "So you realize he has grown, but it's just done in such a shocking way that it's in line with the rest of the movie which is unpredictable, odd and unnerving."

"The Art of Self-Defense" is satirical, dark and quite literally shocking. "The movie is not fully one thing," says Eisenberg. "It's complicated."

"The Art of Self-Defense" opens in theaters Friday, July 12.

Breaking boards and blurring lines

Screenwriter and director Riley Stearns is dedicated to the art of storytelling. In his latest feature, "The Art of Self-Defense," Stearns tells a story that punches you with curiosity while showcasing an exciting variety of twists and turns.

Just like the karate students in the film break boards, Stearns wanted to break many molds with this feature — whether it be the limits of moral ambiguity, the structure of pseudo-masculinity or the lines between reality and a timeless parallel overall.

What was your initial inspiration for the film?

I actually do practice martial arts, but jiu-jitsu. I've been doing that for six years now. When I wrote the film, it was at the tail end of 2015 and I had been training for about two years. I decided to make a film that was set in the world of karate, but also one that explores very real thoughts and fears that I was having at that time, especially about who I was as a person and society's expectations of me as a man. [I wanted to] kind of really poke fun at all of that through this pseudo-sports movie that I think people think is gonna be one thing and go a very structured standard direction, but then really just take it down a darker and more unexpected path.

Since the film does explore that hypermasculine notion that comes with sports, what are you hoping audiences will take away from that point?

I didn't really want to make a "message" film or have anyone think I was trying to teach them a lesson. But at the same time, I think that when I started talking about things that are important to me, I began realizing that they were important to other people as well. So hopefully it's opening up conversations. It's not necessarily giving any answers, and I don't think at the end of the movie it solved anything, to say the least. But, at the same time, it was very important to talk about it in a very overt and literal way and have there be no question as to what side of the argument I land on.

While watching the film, you realize that it takes place not exactly in our world. Was that an imperative aspect to tell this story?

Yes. For me, if you don't have to have something in the movie that's going to be a negative aspect to the film, then just don't have it. You want them to live in a world that you've created.

I also personally enjoyed the irony of the ending and how everything came full circle. What was your thought process for the ending of the film?

I'm a big fan of setups and payoffs. That was an instance of just a funny setup and payoff. Also, a character making a morally abhorrent decision, but for the good of everything else — that was interesting to me. Even though the film, at least I think, ends positively and wraps up in a way that is hopefully cathartic for audiences, at the same time it's not a black-and-white, good or bad situation. I do think there is some moral ambiguity going on. I think if you can have something along those lines, it's always more interesting than just being like, yeah, the good guys win and the bad guys lose.

"The Art of Self-Defense" hits theaters this Friday, July 12.

Confetti showers for Team USA while gov mandates equal pay

The World Cup champions were honored with a ticker-tape parade on Wednesday.

Amid confetti and chants of "equal pay," New York honored the U.S. women's soccer team on Wednesday with a ticker-tape parade up the "Canyon of Heroes," celebrating its World Cup triumph and hailing the players' emergence as icons of women's rights.

The squad's 2-0 win over the Netherlands in the final match on Sunday capped a World Cup campaign that attracted vast television audiences, reflecting the popularity of a U.S. soccer team that has dominated international competition, winning a record fourth title.

A party atmosphere filled Lower Manhattan as marching bands and women on motorcycles escorted floats carrying the players, coaches and staff up Broadway to a City Hall rally along a route dubbed the "Canyon of Heroes."

But the parade in New York's Financial District was more than a tribute to a championship team, which has been involved in a well-publicized fight for equal pay with the U.S. men's national team. The cause has endeared the players to those who support demands by women in general for pay equality.

In March, all 28 players on the women's team filed a gender discrimination lawsuit against the U.S. Soccer Federation, demanding equal compensation with their male counterparts who earn much a higher base pay.

"We stand with them in solidarity. Equal pay for equal work," New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo told a press conference at the start of the parade, after signing into law an equal pay bill passed by the New York State Legislature this year.

Olivia Ciampi, 15, of Queens, New York, who joined the festivities with her mother, agreed equal pay for the team was long overdue.

"They work so hard and they win so many titles and they really do so much and they deserve it," she said.

"This is how I want my daughters to see what women can do and what women should be," added Gabrielle Blecher, 49, of Brooklyn, a mother of daughters aged 11 and 13, who works in an office along the parade route.

The monthlong World Cup tournament attracted a huge television audience and gave the sport fresh momentum in the United States, where it has traditionally lagged in popularity behind American football, baseball and basketball.

At City Hall, Mayor Bill de Blasio presented the ceremonial keys to the city to the team, and star players Megan Rapinoe, Alex Morgan and Carli Lloyd thanked the country for supporting the team.

"Make this world a better place," said Rapinoe, the tournament's top scorer, who thrilled the crowd with her now-famous post-goal pose, arms aloft and a beaming smile on her face.

"Love more, hate less," the purple-haired Rapinoe said, pointing to the team's diversity in terms of race and sexual orientation. "There has been so much contention in these past few years."

As she spoke, a few spectators waved "Trump 2020" flags and one held a sign calling Rapinoe an "America hater," an apparent reference to her refusal to put a hand over her heart when the U.S. national anthem was played during the World Cup. REUTERS

Trump labor chief Acosta defends Epstein plea deal, calling him 'a sexual predator'

Alexander Acosta says he has no intention of stepping down.

Labor Secretary Alexander Acosta on Wednesday defended a non-prosecution agreement he approved more than 10 years ago with financier Jeffrey Epstein, who has now been charged with sex trafficking in underage girls.

Acosta, who was a U.S. prosecutor in Florida at the time, said the new prosecution against Epstein allowed him to more fully explain the decision he made. He said that had his office not been involved, Epstein would have only faced one charge from state prosecutors.

"Without the work of our prosecutors, Epstein would have gotten away with just that state charge" and avoided jail time, Acosta said. "He was and is a sexual predator."

Acosta gave no indication he would resign after days of calls by Democrats for him to step down and said he has the support of Republican President Donald Trump.

"My relationship with the president is outstanding," Acosta said.

Acosta would not say if he would make the same decision regarding Epstein again today.

"We live in a different world; today's world does not allow some of the victim shaming that would have taken place at trial 12 years ago," Acosta said. "I don't think we can say, take a case that is this old and fully know how it would play out today."

The deal came under fresh scrutiny after a Miami Herald investigation shed new light on it, spurring federal prosecutors in New York this week to file new sex trafficking charges against Epstein.

The federal 2007 non-prosecution agreement in Florida, where Acosta was serving as a U.S. attorney, allowed Epstein to reach a plea deal in 2008 on a lesser prostitution offense and serve 13 months in a county jail, with leave during the day. He also had to register as a sex offender. A judge earlier this year ruled the deal was illegal.

On Monday, the U.S. attorney in Manhattan said it was not bound by the plea deal and accused Epstein of luring dozens of girls, some as young as 14, and coercing them into sex acts. Epstein remains in jail while he awaits his bond hearing scheduled for Monday morning.

The U.S. Department of Justice's Office of Professional Responsibility, which investigates alleged misconduct by department lawyers is reviewing how Acosta and the other prosecutors in the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Florida handled the Epstein deal.

Most of its findings are heavily redacted and do not name people subject to its inquiries, although it has issued public reports in some high-profile matters in the past.

The Justice Department disclosed the review into Acosta earlier this year after Republican U.S. Sen. Ben Sasse raised concerns about the handling of the Epstein case with then-Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein, according to a person familiar with their conversation. REUTERS

Lithuanian couple defends world wife-carrying championship title

A Lithuanian couple won the World Wife-Carrying Championship for a second time in a row in the Finnish town of Sonkajarvi on Saturday, triumphing in a contest where men complete an obstacle course with their wives slung over their shoulders.

Each year, the championship draws thousands of visitors to the town of only about 4,000 inhabitants in central Finland. Saturday's competition was the 24th year it has been held.

Having gained followers across the world, preliminary competitions were held in countries such as the United States, Australia, Poland and Britain, organizers said on their website.

Among the two dozen contesting couples, Vytautas Kirkliuskas and his wife Neringa Kirkliauskiene came out on top for a second straight year, completing a 277-yard obstacle course featuring a water trap in one minute and six seconds.

The Lithuanian couple claimed the first place prize — consisting of the wife's weight in beer — after beating six-time champion Taisio Miettinen of Finland and his partner Katja

Kovanen by the slimmest of margins — 0.1 seconds.

"I was looking at the watch and I thought I'm not going to make it, but we did it," Kirkliuskas said.

Wife-carrying as a sport drew inspiration from the 19th century legend of Ronkainen the Robber, who compelled would-be members of his gang to prove their mettle by carrying sacks of grain or live pigs over a similar course.

The competition is also said to look back to an even earlier practice of wife-stealing — leading many present-day contestants to compete with someone else's wife. REUTERS

A tropical vacation to St. Lucia may be easier than you thought!

letters@metro.us

Booking yourself a vacation to a tropical destination is something you could easily put off for a myriad of different reasons. While some of these obstacles can be legitimate, some can be easily attributed to simply being too hesitant to pull the trigger. Well, now with more affordable flights leaving to the island destination of St. Lucia than ever before, a relaxing beach vacation far away from work and life's responsibilities might be easier than you thought.

With direct and non-stop service on American Airlines from Miami, Charlotte and Philadelphia; on JetBlue from New York and Boston; on Delta from Atlanta; and on United Airlines from New Jersey and Chicago, you can book a trip to St. Lucia that fits around your schedule. And when you get there, you can book a stay at two of the island's most renowned resorts, Coconut Bay Beach Resort & Spa and Serenity at Coconut Bay: a girlfriend getaway, a spa getaway, a break once the kids are back in school, for couples, for families, for everyone.

Coconut Bay Beach Resort & Spa

Coconut Bay Beach Resort & Spa is the most popular, award-winning Premium All-Inclusive resort on St. Lucia. The resort takes all of the

France to impose 'eco-tax' on airfares

The European country is set to introduce a green tax on outbound flights from local airports starting next year. Metro investigates what is behind the decision.

Visiting one of the most popular destinations in the world could become more expensive. France is set to implement a new "ecological tax" for airfares that is expected to raise $202 million from the year 2020, to be used to finance the local public transport network.

Reportedly, the amount of tax will depend on the type of ticket a passenger purchases. For example, economy class tickets on flights within France or the E.U. will have a tax of €1.50 ($1.70),

Air France. GETTY IMAGES

$1.70-$20.25

Is the amount of "eco-tax" (per ticket) to be imposed on outgoing flights from France from the year 2020.

while business class will have the highest tariff, of up to €18 ($20.25).

The tax will only apply to outgoing flights and not to those flying into the country.

The new measure is in line with President Emmanuel Macron's government policy, which attempts to strengthen environmental regulation in France. In 2018 he tried to impose tax on diesel fuel, which sparked protests of the so-called yellow vests movement.

To learn more, Metro spoke with Mira Kapfinger, member of Stay Grounded, a group supporting alternatives to aviation.

How did France react?

"This new tax would significantly penalize Air France's competitiveness at a time when the company needs to strengthen its investment capacity to more rapidly reduce its environmental footprint, notably as part of its fleet renewal policy."

"France has one of the most heavily-taxed air transport industries in Europe. These taxes are in addition to the particularly high burden of employer payroll taxation on airlines, whereas Air France's activity contributes 1.1 percent of French national GDP and generates more than 350,000 jobs. Air France is the leading private-sector employer in the Paris region."

"The government's decision is all the more incomprehensible as this new air transport tax would reportedly finance competitive modes of transport including road transportation and not the energy transition in the air transport sector. Such a transition could have been facilitated by supporting the implementation of sustainable biofuel industries or disruptive innovations."

MATT BURKE

If the Sox are, say, swept by the Dodgers this weekend at Fenway, then the mindset of general manager Dave Dombrowski will surely shift ahead of the MLB trade deadline. A rocky start to the second half of the season, and the Red Sox will be sellers rather than buyers at the deadline.

Pull your own weight

Rafael Devers is smoking the ball, owning a team-high .324 batting average. JD Martinez has a team-high 18 home runs on the season, Xander Bogaerts

What has dragged the team down for the brunt of the season, and lately, has been the poor performances from the starting staff and – in particular – the bullpen. It's imperative that the Sox get some sort of consistency out of their rotation, and in the pen, if they are to make a second half surge.

Chris Sale, who hasn't looked like his dominant self since early June, will get the ball on Saturday (7 p.m., FOX). It's a huge start for Sale (3-8, 4.04 ERA), who is having the worst season of his nine year MLB career thus far. Cora has given Sale a nice little break here, as the lefty ace hasn't pitched since July 3 in Toronto. In that tilt, Sale allowed nine hits and five earned runs in 5.2 innings.

In the series finale on Sunday (7 p.m., ESPN), David Price will toe the rubber. Price has been one of the few bright spots for the pitching staff this season as he currently owns a 7-2 record with a 3.24 ERA and a 1.14 WHIP. Price has been particularly effective lately as he's given up a grand total of six earned runs in his last four starts.

On tap

All of the Sox starters will need to be sharp this weekend, facing a lineup that features arguably the best player in baseball this season in Cody Bellinger. Bellinger is crushing the baseball this season as he currently owns a .336 batting average to

ORDER OF NOTICE

TO: Wilfred Dorlus and Micheline Dorlus and to all persons entitled to the benefit of the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act, 50 U.S.C. c. 50 §3901 (et seq)

East Boston Savings Bank, successor by merger to Mt. Washington Cooperative Bank claiming to have an interest in a Mortgage covering real property in Dorchester, numbered 22 Melbourne Street, given by Wilfred Dorlus and Micheline Dorlus to Mt. Washington Cooperative Bank, dated November 7, 2008, and recorded in Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 44235, Page 236, and now held by Plaintiff as successor by merger, has filed with this court a complaint for determination of Defendant's Servicemembers status.

If you now are, or recently have been, in the active military service of the United States of America, then you may be entitled to the benefits of the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act. If you object to a foreclosure of the above-mentioned property on that basis, then you or your attorney must file a written appearance and answer in this court at Three Pemberton Square, Boston, MA 02108 on or before August 05, 2019 or you may lose the opportunity to challenge the foreclosure on the ground of noncompliance with the Act.
